Download NowPart 2: How to Get Started with Final Cut Pro Intro Templates Once you've selected a template above, there are just a few simple steps you need to take to load Final Cut Pro. Once downloaded and placed in the correct folder, the new opener appears inside Final Cut. Right next to the built-in generators. Step 1: Download the template You can download the template using any of the links above. In MotionArray, you may need to sign in to your account first. Download the opening template file. Find the folder where you downloaded it (probably the Downloads folder). Double-click to unpack the file. Step 2: Copy the FilesNow that you've unpacked the files, you'll need to copy them to the correct folder in Final Cut Pro. If Motion is installed, the destination folder will be different than if you only have Final Cut. We'll explain both options below: If you have motion installed, the folder you need to find is: Movies/Motion Templates/GeneratorsIf you don't have Motion installed, you'll need to find this folder:Applications/Final Cut Pro/Content/Plugins/MediaProviders/MotionEffect.fx/Content/Resources/Templates/GeneratorsCopy the new template files in the corresponding destination folder listed above. Step 3: Find the new opener for Final Cut ProNow that has already loaded the new opening template for Final Cut Pro, it should appear inside generators sidebar right next to all the other built-in generators. Open Final Cut Pro. In the upper-left corner, open the Generators sidebar by clicking on the icon at the top of the screen. Click generators to open the list of generators. Wrap it around or type name in the search bar to find it. Drag the template down into the timeline and add it to the project. Click the template in the timeline and open The Supervisor. Here you can change the template settings, including adding photos and video clips to drop zones and changing text. A few useful tips remember that your audience is on video. If you share this video via social media, your attention span will be very short, so you might want to keep the introduction in less than 10 seconds. If you're making videos for a film festival or business presentation, you can get away with longer introductions. Do not forget to take advantage of the opportunity to see the brand during the launch. If you're going to start any video with the same intro, then that's what viewers associate with you, so it's a great place to showcase your logo and channel name. Memorable jingles can add a lot of personality to your introduction. Final Cut Pro's Sound Effects library and Motion Array have royalty-free music. That's it, that's it! Hopefully these openers were all you need to build your video personality and start off with the right foot of your viewers. We've covered 23 of the best new openers to download as well as instructions for installing new templates so you can use them in Final Cut Pro. But the intro is just the beginning! There's plenty of additional work to be done producing quality content, and if you want to have fantastic tools for all your video editing needs, check out the rest of what MotionArray has to offer. Download NowPart 2: How to Use Logo Reveal Templates 3 Easy StepsA beauty of this template lets you see how quickly you can create a fantastic looking logo animation. Once you've selected the template you want to try from above, follow the 3 easy steps below to install it in Final Cut Pro. After installation, the new logo reveal template appears right next to final cut's built-in effects, transitions, titles, and generators. Step 1: Download the new template fileSy select your favorite template above and download it. In MotionArray, you may need to sign in to your account first. Download the template file. Find the folder where you downloaded it in Finder. Step 2: Transfer the template ta- The location of the folder depends on whether Motion is installed or only final cut pro. If Motion is installed, the folder you need to find is: / Movies / Motion TemplatesIf you do not have Motion installed, then you need to find this folder:Applications / Final Cut Pro / Contents / Plugins / MediaProviders / MotionEffect.fx/ Content / Sources / TemplatesThere should be defined if the template is an effect, generator, title, or transition. You can find information on the page at the download site or search for documentation in the extracted file. Copy the folder that contains the new template from above to the appropriate subfolder. If it's an address, then you need to copy it to the titles folder, if it's a generator, then you need to copy it to the producers folder, etc. Step 3: Build Your Splash Logo in Final Cut ProWith the template loaded into the corresponding folder, Final Cut will automatically display the new logo animation along with the other titles, transitions, effects, and generators. If you haven't already done so, open Final Cut Pro.If your template has an effect or transition, you can find the menus by opening it on the right side of the screen. If it's an address or generator, you can find it in the sidebar in the upper left corner. You can find it by typing the name of the template, the thumbnail should appear. Drag the template thumbnail to the timeline and add it to the project. Click the template in the timeline and open The Supervisor. This is where you will add the logo file and change settings such as color, background, and so on. For the covers to be related to setting up with the new template. Each template may vary slightly, so you can check the documentation that came with the download for each about the customizable controls in the template. You can also add your own effects to the top as the hue effects that personalize the opening more. But if you can't get the look you're looking for with a pre-made template, then there's another option. Part 3: Creating your own template in Final Cut ProHere is a basic scenario for creating a cool logo opener for videos with built-in titles from Final Cut Pro. This method doesn't even require a logo file, so it's great if you just need a quick custom logo, but you don't have time to design it. Step 1: Add the title of TimelineFinal Cut Pro comes packed with awesome pre-made titles, effects, and generators. Many of them can be used and customized to create a unique logo for opening your videos. This tutorial will use Basic 3D, a built-in title. If you haven't already, create a new Project and add any clips and content you want to include in your Timeline. To open the address browser, click the button in the upper-left corner. Find Basic 3D and find its thumbnail in the list. Drag the Title thumbnail to the timeline and add it to your project. Place it on the track above everything else. Drag the end of the Base 3D address so that it is dragged along the entire length of the video project. Step 2: The AppearanceTo Basic 3D title looks pretty professional, but we'll adjust it further by changing some options. These instructions are quite specific, but they can be creative and fine-tune for any type of appearance that fits the project. Select the address on your Timeline, and then open The Supervisor. On the Title tab, locate the 3D text and change the Animation style to Zoom Down. On the Type tab, select the Type control, and then type a brand name. Scroll down and look for the Depth control under 3D text and increase it to 40. Change the Front Edge control to Bee beeted. Find the Material Control by scrolling down and changing it to Metal&gt; Chrome. Step 3: Add keyframes and effectsWhat after the desired appearance, it's time to add some movement to the composition. We will be converting the logo opening with a watermark around the corner and then back to the logo outro at the end, with keyframes. In the timeline, move the game head so that it is positioned immediately after the intro animation of the 3D title. On the right side of the screen, click the Effects icon to open the Effects browser, and then look for the Effect called Flashing. Drag Flashing to the title in the timeline. On the Video tab, turn off the Intensity control to 3 and add a key image by clicking on the diamond on the right side of the slider. Now move the Playhead a few seconds ahead of the composition and bring the intensity control down to 0. Repeat this process toward the end of the timeline. Add a key image of intensity 3 just before the outro animation. A few seconds before the intensity is down to 0.Step 4: Add position and scaleIf preview So far you have to watch the 3D title tumbling and flash for a few seconds before you still have. Instead of staying in the middle of the screen of your entire video, you bring it down to the corner to act as a watermark during video time, creating keyframes with transform controls. Move the Play Master to approximately 1 second after the intro animation and create a key image in the Position Supervisor in the Transform group on the Video tab. Also, create a key frame for Scaling in the same section to lock the address size. Now move the head of the game forward 1 or 2 seconds and create new key images position and scale. Using either the controls of the Inspector or the Transform tool in the Viewer, set the title so that it fits in the corner like a watermark. You can do this by adjusting its position and size (size). Fade your video content by creating two key images for Opacity controls at the beginning of the video, immediately after the 3D title intro animation is complete. Repeat the last step reverse at the end of the video to fade the content, leaving only the title as outro. Although it takes a little longer than downloading a template, creating your own logo opening allows you to create a unique animation that fits the brand. Final Cut Pro is packed with tons of titles, generators, and effects that are all customized in creative ways to create. So that wraps up! Armed with the 18 top logo openers we have shared above, you should be ready to create stunning logo animations either by installing a template or building one yourself using Final Cut Pro's built-in resources. And of course, there is plenty of chance to be creative and produce something truly unique, whichever method you choose. Now many of the above templates we share are hosted by Motion Array, which hosts thousands of plugins, effects, and more downloads. This is an extensive resource for all the tools you may need in the video editing toolkit, and of course, a great place to find Final Cut Pro logo templates! Templates!
